Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1400 on Monday 25 Oct 2021

UK Outlook for Saturday 30 Oct 2021 to Monday 8 Nov 2021:
Towards the end of October, Atlantic systems will move in from the west, bringing unsettled and windy conditions. On Saturday, although the north and far southeast may see some dry spells, the weather will be unsettled for the rest of the UK, especially in central and western areas, where spells of prolonged heavy rain may develop. The weather will remain unsettled across the UK for the rest of October, with heavy rainfall likely to continue in the west. In the second half of the period, it will be wettest in the west and northwest, but still with some drier interludes. Driest conditions are likely across southern and southeastern areas, with lighter winds and a risk of overnight fog. Temperatures are expected to be generally around or slightly above average.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.